A Note from Fragile Removals

Moving is one of those things that feels manageable right up until it isn't — and when the details aren't all locked in yet, it's easy for the whole process to feel like it's getting away from you before it's even started. That's completely normal, and we get it.

Here's where things stand with putting your guide together:

What we still need from you: - The specific service name or topic (it's showing as a placeholder right now, and we want to get that exactly right) - Service details and specifications (nothing provided yet) - Supporting documents — brochures, capability statements, pricing guides — anything we can work from - Context about who this guide is for and what it needs to cover

Why this matters:

At Fragile Removals, we don't guess. We don't fill gaps with something that sounds plausible but might not be accurate. Every guide we put our name on needs to be built from real, verified information — because that's the same standard we hold ourselves to on every job we take.

Every factual claim has to trace back to a source document you've provided. Without those, we'd essentially be making things up, and that's not how we've operated for the past 20 years. More than 50,000 customers have trusted us because we're straight with people. That starts here.

To get your guide created, send through:

1. The service name — residential removals, office relocations, packing services, fragile item transport, or whatever specific offering this guide covers 2. Service details and operational specifics — how the service works, what's included, timelines, team size, equipment used 3. Source documents — brochures, pricing guides, capability statements, insurance details, accreditation information 4. Your intended audience — a first-home mover? A business relocating its office? Knowing this shapes the tone and what the guide needs to cover

Once those pieces are in place, we can build a comprehensive, accurate, citation-backed guide that genuinely represents Fragile Removals — the kind of resource that gives your customers real confidence and reflects the AFRA-accredited service you deliver every day.

Send through the details and we'll take it from there.
