Common questions this guide answers 1. How far in advance should I book a removalist? → 4–6 weeks standard; 8+ weeks during peak periods (end of month, school holidays, November–January) 2. What items cannot be transported by Fragile Removals? → Hazardous materials, flammable liquids, gas cylinders, perishable food, pets, and plants 3. What is the difference between a dedicated truck and backloading? → A dedicated truck is used exclusively for one customer's move; backloading shares space on a return journey at lower cost but with less timing flexibility

Fragile Removals: your complete moving & relocation guide

Moving is stressful. We know that, and we've built everything we do around making it less so. At Fragile Removals, we're a team of trusted removalists who genuinely care about getting you from A to B with your belongings — and your sanity — intact. Whether you're moving a family home, transporting precious and high-value items, or relocating an entire office, we bring over 20 years of experience, the right equipment, and a lot of care to every job.

About this guide

This guide is here to help you — whether you're already a customer, thinking about booking, or just starting to plan your move. We want you to know what to look for in a quality removals service, how to set yourself up for a smooth relocation, and what makes a professional removals team genuinely different from hiring a van and hoping for the best.

At this stage, we haven't yet included full product and service documentation — things like detailed specifications, pricing schedules, and service tier brochures are on their way. So for now, this guide focuses on the core principles, best practices, and service categories that Fragile Removals works within every day.

Once that full documentation is ready, we'll update this guide to include:

- Specific service names and descriptions
- Pricing structures and package details
- Certifications, accreditations, and operational standards
- Equipment specifications and fleet details
- Any relevant safety or handling documentation

Why professional removals make all the difference

Moving home or office consistently ranks among the most stressful life events people go through. The physical demands, the logistical complexity, the emotional weight of it all — and the very real risk of damage to things you love and can't replace — mean that professional removals aren't just a nice-to-have. For most people, they're essential.

That's something we understand at Fragile Removals. Our name says it all: we treat every single item in your possession as if it were fragile, whether it technically is or not. That mindset shapes everything we do, from the moment we start planning your move to the moment the last box is placed exactly where you want it.

What can go wrong without professional help

Even a short-distance move can unravel quickly without the right people behind it. Here's what we see happen when moves aren't properly supported:

- Damaged furniture from improper lifting, inadequate padding, or loads that shift in transit
- Broken valuables — glassware, artwork, electronics, antiques — that can't be replaced
- Personal injury from heavy lifting without the right technique or equipment
- Delays and missed deadlines, because it's almost always harder and longer than people expect
- Unexpected costs from vehicle hire, packing materials, and helpers who weren't quite up to the task

Our AFRA-accredited team eliminates or significantly reduces every one of these risks, through proper training, purpose-built equipment, and the kind of hands-on experience that only comes from helping more than 50,000 customers move successfully.

Our core services

A full-service removals company like Fragile Removals operates across several key service areas. Each one requires its own expertise, equipment, and approach — and we've built genuine capability across all of them.

1. Residential removals

Residential moves are at the heart of what we do, whether it's a studio apartment or a sprawling family home. A quality residential service looks like this:

- Pre-move assessment: We walk through your property to understand the volume of goods, any access challenges, and items that need special handling — so there are no surprises on moving day - Packing services: Our professional packers use industry-grade materials to protect items of every size and fragility level - Furniture disassembly and reassembly: Beds, wardrobes, flat-pack furniture — we carefully break it down and rebuild it at your new place, often before dinner is on the table - Loading and transport: Our trained team loads vehicles in a deliberate sequence that minimises movement and keeps everything protected in transit - Unloading and placement: Every item is delivered to the right room and positioned exactly where you want it

2. Commercial and office removals

Commercial relocations come with their own layer of complexity — IT infrastructure, sensitive documents, specialised equipment, and the very real pressure of minimising downtime. We handle all of it with the same care and professionalism we bring to every job:

- After-hours and weekend moves so your business keeps running with minimal disruption - IT equipment handling with anti-static packaging and careful cable management - Secure document transport with chain-of-custody protocols where required - Workstation disassembly and reinstallation at your new premises - Coordination with building management for lift access, loading dock bookings, and parking permits

3. Fragile and high-value item transport

This is where our name really earns its meaning. Not every removals company is equipped to handle fragile, antique, or high-value items — but it's one of our specialities. Transporting these pieces with the care they deserve means:

- Custom crating for artwork, sculptures, and oversized fragile pieces - Climate-controlled vehicles for items sensitive to temperature or humidity - Specialised padding and wrapping that goes well beyond standard blankets and bubble wrap - Experienced handlers with specific training in fine art, antiques, and luxury goods - Insurance options that reflect the true value of what we're carrying

4. Packing and unpacking services

Handing the entire packing process to a professional team is one of the best decisions you can make. Our full packing service covers:

- Supply of all boxes, tape, wrapping materials, and protective padding - Systematic, room-by-room packing with clear, consistent labelling - Inventory documentation for full accountability and easy unpacking - Careful individual wrapping of glassware, crockery, mirrors, and picture frames - Unpacking at your destination and removal of all packing waste, so you're not wading through cardboard on your first night

If you'd prefer to pack some things yourself and leave the trickier or more fragile items to us, we offer partial packing services too. We work with you, not around you.

5. Storage solutions

Moves rarely line up perfectly on the calendar. Our storage services bridge the gap between leaving one property and settling into the next:

- Short-term and long-term options to suit whatever your timeline looks like - Secure, monitored facilities with restricted access - Climate control for items that need it - Containerised storage where your goods are packed into dedicated containers that aren't opened until delivery - Flexible access arrangements for when you need to retrieve something during the storage period

How to set yourself up for a smooth move

No matter which of our services you engage, a little preparation on your end goes a long way. Here's what we recommend to every customer.

Step 1: Start early

The earlier you start planning, the more options you have — and the less stressful the whole process feels. Booking a trusted removals company well in advance is especially important during peak periods: end-of-month dates, school holidays, and the summer rush. Early bookings also tend to give you more flexibility on timing and scheduling.

Step 2: Declutter before you pack

Moving is one of the best opportunities you'll ever have to lighten the load, literally. Every item you choose not to move saves time, money, and effort. Think about:

- Donating usable items to charity - Selling items of value through online marketplaces - Recycling or disposing of things that are no longer functional - Digitising paper documents where possible

Step 3: Create a moving inventory

Document everything you're planning to move. A thorough inventory helps you get accurate, transparent quotes from removalists, serves as a checklist during loading and unloading, provides a clear record for insurance purposes, and helps you flag high-value or fragile items that need special attention.

Step 4: Notify relevant parties

A change of address means reaching out to more people than you might expect. Common notifications include:

- Electoral roll and government agencies - Banks, superannuation funds, and financial institutions - Insurance providers - Utilities: electricity, gas, water, internet, and phone - Australia Post for mail redirection - Employer and payroll department - Schools, medical practitioners, and other service providers - Subscriptions and online accounts

Step 5: Prepare your new property

Before moving day arrives, make sure your new place is ready to receive everything:

- Confirm that all utilities are connected - Clean the property, or arrange for professional cleaning - Take photos of the property's condition before you move in - Think about where large furniture pieces will go - Make sure there's clear access for the removals vehicle

Step 6: Pack strategically

If you're doing some of the packing yourself, these principles will make a real difference:

- Heavy items in small boxes: Books, tools, and dense items should go in smaller boxes to keep weight manageable - Light items in large boxes: Pillows, linen, and lightweight items can fill larger boxes without making them unmanageable - Fill boxes completely: Partially filled boxes collapse under weight — use padding to fill any gaps - Label clearly: Every box should show its contents and the room it's heading to - Pack an essentials box: Toiletries, a change of clothes, phone chargers, snacks, and important documents — the things you'll want to find the moment you arrive

What moving day looks like with us

When you move with Fragile Removals, moving day follows a clear, structured process designed to keep things calm, efficient, and stress-free from start to finish.

Arrival and walk-through

Our team will arrive at the agreed time, punctual and ready to go. We'll do a brief walk-through of the property to confirm the scope of work, check for any last-minute changes, and take note of any specific instructions you have about particular items.

Protection of your property

Before a single item is moved, we take care of both your belongings and the properties involved:

- Door frames and corners are padded to prevent scuffs and damage
- Floor runners are laid to protect your flooring
- Furniture is wrapped in moving blankets before being carried through doorways
- Everything is secured in the vehicle before we move an inch

Loading

Items are loaded in a deliberate, considered sequence: heavy, solid pieces first to create a stable base; lighter and more fragile items on top and against the cab wall; mattresses and flat items standing vertically along the sides. Nothing shifts. Nothing gets left to chance.

Transit

Our drivers choose routes that minimise sharp turns, heavy braking, and rough surfaces wherever possible. For long-distance moves, we check the load at rest stops along the way. Your belongings are in safe hands the whole journey.

Unloading and placement

At your new place, everything is unloaded carefully and placed in the rooms you've designated. Large furniture goes exactly where you direct. Boxes are stacked neatly so you can get into them easily. We don't just drop and run.

Post-move inspection

Before our team leaves, we do a final walk-through together, confirming everything has arrived safely, been placed correctly, and that neither property has been damaged. If anything needs attention, we address it on the spot.

How to choose the right removals company

Not every removals company brings the same level of care, reliability, or professionalism to the job. Here's what to look for when you're making your decision.

Experience and specialisation

How long have they been doing this, and do they have real experience with your type of move? A company that specialises in fragile and high-value items will approach your move very differently from a general freight operator. With more than 20 years in the industry and over 50,000 customers served, we've seen and handled just about everything.

Licensing and insurance

Professional removalists should carry appropriate public liability insurance and, where applicable, goods-in-transit insurance. Always confirm the extent of coverage before signing anything.

Transparent pricing

Reputable companies give you clear, itemised quotes with no hidden fees. Be cautious of unusually low quotes that might exclude essential services or conceal additional charges. At Fragile Removals, we believe in plain language quotes that tell you exactly what you're getting.

Customer reviews and reputation

Look for consistent, detailed reviews from verified customers. Pay particular attention to how the company responds to any negative feedback — that often tells you more about their values and customer service approach than the glowing five-star reviews.

Equipment and fleet

The condition of a company's vehicles and equipment reflects how seriously they take their work. Well-maintained trucks, purpose-built moving equipment, and quality packing materials all contribute to a safer, more professional move.

Communication and responsiveness

From your first enquiry through to post-move follow-up, how a company communicates matters. A team that's responsive, clear, and proactive — one that keeps you informed at every step — is far more likely to deliver the experience you're hoping for. We're easy to deal with, and we're available when you need us.

Insurance and liability: what you should know

Understanding how insurance works in removals is important for protecting your belongings and making sure your expectations are well-founded.

Goods-in-transit insurance

This covers your items while they're being transported. Coverage levels, exclusions, and claims processes vary between providers. Key questions to ask include:

- What is the maximum coverage per item and per move? - Are there exclusions for self-packed items?
- How are claims assessed, and what documentation is required? - Is there a per-item or per-claim excess?

Public liability insurance

This covers damage caused to third-party property — for example, if a removalist accidentally damages a wall, floor, or fixture in your home or your destination property. Always confirm that your chosen removals company holds adequate public liability coverage. We do.

Your own contents insurance

Many home contents insurance policies include some cover for items during transit. Review your policy carefully and speak to your insurer to understand whether additional coverage makes sense for high-value items.

Removals and the environment

The removals industry has an environmental footprint, and responsible companies are taking meaningful steps to reduce it. At Fragile Removals, we're committed to doing our part:

- Reusable packing materials: Plastic crates and reusable padding that come back to us after your move, reducing cardboard waste
- Route optimisation: Efficient routing means less fuel

consumption and fewer emissions - Fleet maintenance: Well-maintained vehicles run more efficiently and produce fewer emissions - Recycling packing waste: Responsible disposal and recycling of cardboard, bubble wrap, and other materials after your move - Digital documentation: Quotes, contracts, and receipts are all handled digitally

If sustainability matters to you, we're happy to talk through our practices in more detail.

Frequently asked questions

How far in advance should I book a removals company? For most moves, four to six weeks ahead is a good rule of thumb. During peak periods — end of month, school holidays, or the November–January stretch — we'd recommend booking eight weeks or more in advance to lock in your preferred date. The earlier you reach out, the more options we can offer you.

What items can't be transported by a removals company? Most professional removalists, including us, won't transport hazardous materials such as flammable liquids, gas cylinders, certain cleaning chemicals, or perishable food items. Pets and plants are also typically excluded. When you book, we'll provide a full list of restricted items so you're completely across it.

Do I need to be present on moving day? We strongly recommend that you or a trusted representative be there for the entire move. It means you can answer questions, direct where things go, and be part of the final walk-through inspection.

What happens if something is damaged during the move? We have a clear, straightforward claims process for any damaged items. Document any damage with photographs immediately and let us know as soon as possible. Having a pre-move inventory and photos of valuable items beforehand will support any claim — which is exactly why we recommend doing that preparation upfront.

Can you move a piano or other large musical instruments? Yes — but piano and large instrument removal is a specialist service. Make sure whoever you choose has specific experience and the right equipment for it. Improper handling can cause irreparable damage, and that's never a risk worth taking. Confirm this with us when you enquire.

What's the difference between a backloading service and a dedicated truck? A dedicated truck means the vehicle is used exclusively for your move — your belongings, your timeline, your control. Backloading involves sharing truck space with other customers' goods on a return journey. It's typically more affordable, but offers less flexibility on timing and handling. We'll help you work out which option suits your situation best.
